

ABSTRACT

An annular or arcuate frame element made of entirely of substantially radiolucent body material is provided for an external fixation device for bones. In particular, an annular or arcuate frame of substantially radiolucent body material embeds two beryllium rings. Such frames may be interchanged with the non-radiolucent annular or arcuate frames of various external fixators.